

Consultation, IA <consultation@bia.gov>

FW: define history

1 message

Gary Perris <garyperris@hotmail.com>
To: "consultation@bia.gov" <consultation@bia.gov>

Fri, Jul 26, 2013 at 6:01 PM

From: garyperris@hotmail.com
To: nwallace@newspress.com
Subject: FW: define history
Date: Fri, 26 Jul 2013 22:00:09 +0000

One of the reasons I fear having a Chumash museum in Santa Ines Valley is the fear that the museum would highlight the same history found on Chumash websites. There seems to be historic accounts found on-line contrary to Chumash websites about the Chumash's survival. One example of this is the Santa Barbara Genealogical Society. SBGN.org offers history stating local American Indian tribes did not survive the white man. Another is Cambridge Press and the Library of Congress who state that by 2080 only %8 of 'American Indian' in the USA will be racially half-Indian or more. But when reading casino affiliated websites one could mistakenly assume that full blooded Chumash offspring are living, breathing and needing housing. Chumash and non-Chumash should come to agreement about such a fundamental topic before the general public may be hoodwinked.

Notes:

"did not survive"

p. 7

http://sbgen.org/upload/files/SBSD_History\(1\).pdf.pdf)

. We survived because of our strength as a tribe"

<http://www.santaynezchumash.org/culture.html>

